The History of Cavanaugh's University City

Patrick Cavanaugh arrived in the United States at Ellis Island in March of 1924. He was the third child of Catherine and Thomas Kavanagh. The K was changed to a C when Patrick was in third grade and found out there was no K in the Gaelic alphabet. Soon after, mostly everyone else in the family also changed their last name to Cavanaugh.

After settling in Philadelphia, Patrick worked for the Philadelphia Electric Company at 23rd and Market Streets, and was a laborer working on the Ben Franklin Bridge during its construction in the early 1930's. This was a very lucrative job for immigrants because of the dangerous nature of bridge construction.

The Cavanaugh's Restaurant legacy started at the end of prohibition in 1934, when a new liquor license was issued to Patrick at 3132 Market Street. He originally opened Cavanaugh's as a bar only and after a few years added soups and sandwiches, eventually opening a back room dining area.

During the ensuing years, Patrick purchased the adjoining buildings and expanded the restaurant to include a large dining room, cocktail lounge and banquet room.

Cavanaugh's established itself as a Philadelphia landmark for many years, serving generations of workers from the Post Office, Amtrak, Conrail, The Philadelphia Bulletin and thousands of others from throughout the City of Brotherly Love.

Patrick had three Daughters, Patricia, Maureen and Sally.

In the late 1950s, Patricia met William Pawliczek while they both attended the Drexel Institute of Technology. Bill and Patricia were married in 1962.

After Patrick's death in September 1973, Bill took over the family business and guided its growth as a fixture in University City and a favorite meeting place for students, faculty members and employees of Drexel and Penn.

Cavanaugh's on 32nd and Market Streets closed on June 8, 1988. Shortly thereafter in September of the same year, Cavanaugh's re-opened at its present location on the corner of 39th and Sansom Streets.

Cavanaugh's is proud to celebrate our 25th Anniversary at this location and our 70th year of operation.
